

Abstract of the Disclosure

Liquids are extracted from a process material by compressing the process material; decompressing and mixing the process material, and then recompressing the process material in a mechanical screw press.